NEW ART, NEW ARTISTS:

Pure Gallery is proud to present a new artist being added to our offerings, Russian artist, Irene Sheri. Irene has typically produced figurative work in bold bright colors. 'Swept Away' shown here, is one such image. But all artists need to stretch themselves and Irene is no exception. She has been painting landscapes most recently and the hillsides come alive with color. 'Lavender Twilight' is shown as an example of her latest work.

Pure Gallery is proud to present new sculpture at the gallery. The artist, Jennine Parker, works her bronze sculptures with texture so you want to feel them as well as see them. These lithe nudes are so graceful, I am sure you will want to invite them into your home. Because these are limited editions, we can keep the prices very reasonable. The work is 17 to 22 inches tall and retails for $500 to $955 each. Check them out on the website or stop by to see them in person.

In 1988, a year after she moved to St Petersburg, Irene was at a summer practice session together with a group of other students at the old Russian city of Suzdal. At the last day of the practice all of the students came to the museum to show their work, to be delivered two days later to the school. The museum curator told tourists that if they wanted, they could purchase any students' work they liked. One hour later all 12 Irene's works were gone. No one purchased a single painting of the other students. Angry and envious the students told Irene that she was supposed to turn her 12 paintings in two days later, and the money she earned will be for sure the last professional earnings she ever had. The students told her she would surely be expelled from the college for not turning her work in. Two days later Irene submitted 12 new paintings and was the only student to receive an "A" for this summer session.

In 2000, artwork was accepted into the permanent collection of the Museum of Academy of Art, and in 2001 the same painting "Early Snow" (78" x 80") received the highest honor in Russia, the "Russian State Award for Outstanding achievement in Art or Entertainment". Irene's works are in collections of such prominent art collectors as musician Mstislav Rostropovich, ex-St Petersburg Mayor Anatoly Sobchak, oil tycoon Leo Vaisberg, and many others.

Pure Gallery has Irene's limited editions on canvas. Perhaps it's time to add Irene's work to your own collection.

Just in ~ images from Rod Chase of our nation's capital, Washington, DC. His photo realistic style is perfect for business settings. I also have an image of Central Park (above) from Rod that is larger and absolutely stunning.
